The self-catering unit named Montispectus is situated within the Blaauwberg Nature Reserve with spectacular views down fynbos slopes, across the city, to seven kilometres of rocky and sandy coastline and the ocean and beyond. The reserve presents itself as one of the few viewpoints in the world from where you can see two proclaimed world heritage sites, namely Table Mountain and Robben Island. The name Montispectus derives from the Bloubergstrand dwarf burrowing skink (Scelotes montispectus). In 2002 the first specimen was discovered in the Blaauwberg Nature Reserve. Given the spectacular views of Table Mountain from this locality, the animal was appropriately named Scelotes montispectus – montispectus meaning 'to behold the mountain'. The presence of this species within the Blaauwberg Nature Reserve is of immense conservation importance, as it is considered to be endemic to the area.

The self-catering unit sleeps four guests in an open plan bedroom with two single beds, a double bunk bed and a pine cupboard and doors that lead onto the deck. There is no electricity. Light is provided by photovoltaic panels that charge the batteries and provide soft light between 16:00 and 09:00. Potable water feeds the unit and outdoor bathroom. Interesting features of the unit are the photovoltaic panels that provide light and gas stove, fridge/freezer and outdoor shower as well as the self-composting toilet (no flushing needed) providing for a unique experience.

The lounge, dining room and kitchenette area opens up on to a deck and allows a cool breeze to circulate while you enjoy the views. The kitchen area has a sink, gas fridge/freezer, gas stove, pots and pans, kettle and cutlery and crockery for four guests. A braai area with a weber braai is available. Central parking is a few metres from the unit on Blaauwberg Hill with a gravel path that leads to the unit.

The unit is self-catering with guests having to maintain and clean the unit for the duration of their stay. No towels are provided and guests are required to bring their own towels and soap.
